Woman cries foul over father's burned mouth

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN

For the Review

A Didsbury woman is looking for answers after a recent incident at a long-term care facility left her elderly father with chemical burns on his tongue.

During a visit two weeks ago with her 97-year-old father, Robert Kerns, Rose Balcom soon noticed that something was wrong.

Kerns was found to have chemical burns on his tongue and mouth, diagnosed by one doctor as an allergic reaction, then by another as a yeast infection.

Finally, a visit to Peter Lougheed Centre in Calgary determined that the burns had been caused by a caustic substance.

"A lot of the lining in his mouth fell out. It was very painful and then he wasn't able to eat properly," explains Balcom, who believes that the injuries were caused by a mix-up in denture products, which may have been improperly labelled.

She notes that her father is still unable to eat and is concerned about the toll that the experience has taken on him.

"Somebody at that age is very vulnerable and it affects not only his physical state, that affects his mental state as well and I constantly worry."

The first thing that Balcom did after receiving the diagnosis was to contact Health Canada.

Since then, she has had several conversations with health officials, and has sent them pictures of the products that were used to aid in their ongoing investigation of the incident.

"They've been quite good," Balcom says.

She is also working with Alberta Health officials to examine the possibility of abuse, which is defined by the 1998 Protection for Persons in Care Act as "intentionally causing bodily harm."

Balcom says that before this event occurred, she had been very pleased with the care that her father was receiving. However, the recent mishap has shaken her faith in the extended-care facility.

"The girls there are great, everything else," notes Balcom. "Now, since this has happened, I have a problem with trust. I worry."

She says that Kerns is recovering well after the ordeal - "every day he's come back a little bit more" - and adds that she hopes the investigation's findings will prevent similar incidents in the future.

"We want to make sure my dad's safe, and all the other residents everywhere are safe from having safe, innocuous denture products and the caustic ones, so that this can't happen."

A spokesman for Alberta Health declined to comment on the investigation, citing legislation protecting patient privacy.

If you have a concern relating to elder care, call the Office of Patient Relations at (403) 944-2088 or (403) 944-2077.

Council moving forward with lagoon upgrade funding request

BY SABEEN AHMAD
Review Staff

Didsbury council is testing the waters with the province for its approval of upgrades to the town's lagoon system.

Last week, council agreed to request funding from the government to upgrade its lagoon wastewater treatment system to an aerated lagoon system.

Alberta Environment turned down the town's bids for funds to assist in a feasibility study for a regional lagoon system earlier this summer.

Efficiency and cost were cited for the funding denial.

The town's lagoon is hitting maximum capacity sooner than what was anticipated.

While council hasn't approved any specific project yet, councillors are discussing upgrades that will include expanding existing cells to allow sufficient capacity as well as improving the quality of the Rosebud River with the aerated lagoon system.

Council is seeking financial assistance from the Alberta Water/Wastewater Partnership as a 50/50 funding where the town will invest in the lagoon and would like the government to match the amount equally.

Mayor Brian Wittal says an upgrade project could cost between $15 million and $20 million depending on the degree of upgrades that are needed.

Engineering studies would have to be done to determine what the best course of action should be, if and when the project is approved and receives some funding.

"There are a lot of applications for these funds so all we can do is hope the government deems our project to be of high enough importance to receive some funding to at least start the first phase of the project so that we can start moving forward with the much needed upgrades that are necessary," says Wittal.

Council hopes to find out early in 2009 whether funding has been approved and would like to see the project be completed over the next couple of years if it is approved.

Livestock producers - By January 1, 2009:

- You will need to update your current Canadian Cattle Identification Agency (CCIA) premise identification information or apply for a new premise identification number if you don't have one.
- A new application form will be mailed to you only if you received the first AFRP II payment.
- The application will include a declaration and authorization for Agricultural Financial Services Corporation (AFSC) and Alberta Agriculture and Rural Development (ARD) to verify your information. Your information will be kept private and protected.

Cow-calf producers - By January 1, 2009:

- Age verify your 2008 calf crop by entering birth dates for all calves born in 2008 in the CCIA database. Additional assistance will be available to help you enter birth dates in the system.

Feedlot operators - Starting January 1, 2009:

- The CCIA tag number for each animal arriving and leaving the feedlot (not going to slaughter) must be reported to the CCIA within seven days.

Forms will be available at all AFSC and ARD offices throughout Alberta. If you have questions or need assistance, please contact the Ag-Info Centre at 310-FARM or on-line at www.agric.gov.ab.ca.

Man regains hearing after August robbery

MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

When Rick Burgess walks in to a room, he no longer has to read lips or hope the person he's talking to is a loud speaker.

That's because on August 24 his vehicle was broken into and his hearing aids along with several other items were stolen and have never been found.

Recently though, Burgess has been able to secure a new set and can now function as he did before the robbery.

The stolen hearing aids, worth $6,400, were only fitted within the past year through a workers' compensation claim, but when they were stolen, Burgess was left with nothing to assist him with his hearing.

"What can you do?" he said. "If someone steals your car you don't drive, if someone steals my hearing aids I don't hear."

Compounding the problem further was that he couldn't afford replacements and workers' compensation wouldn't replace them until 2012.

Thus far his workbag has been recovered in Calgary, but his other belongings and hearing aids were not inside.

Burgess and his wife moved to Carstairs from Victoria on August 1 and are in the process of renovating their home.

He says the thieves also took a workbag, work clothes, satellite antenna, glucose monitoring equipment, and GPS system.

A second vehicle was also broken into and lose change was stolen.

While Burgess says he was upset about the entire incident, he says everything else can be replaced except for his hearing aids, something that has more than just material value to him.

"Do you realize what you've taken, do you realize the devastation and extreme inconvenience you have caused by taking these hearing aids and now how much world is being missed? I'm not hearing what's going on," he said shortly after the incident.

Anyone with information regarding the incident is asked to contact Didsbury RCMP at 335-3382 or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Opinion

Commentary Back to the polls same ol', same ol'

TIM DENOUDSTEN
For the Review

Alberta Liberal party leader Kevin Taft recently made the audacious suggestion that inmates should be allowed to vote because "we want these people to reintegrate into society."

Don't get me wrong. I am totally in favour of rehabilitative programs for those who are incarcerated, especially those who are victims of addiction. Providing drug and alcohol treatment and job training allows convicts to emerge from the penal system better and more productive people than they were when they first entered.

However, it is ludicrous to suggest that granting the right to vote to an incarcerated murderer will in any way prepare inmates for a return to normal life.

Indeed, 'normal life' for 59 per cent of voting-eligible Albertans consists specifically of not going to the polls at all, according to statistics gathered during the most recent provincial election.

Indeed, voter turnout during the March election that brought Stelmach into office was the lowest in Alberta history, at a paltry 41 per cent. Moreover, the premier received only 53 per cent of those votes.

What this boils down to is that a scant one-fifth of Albertans voted in favour of the current Conservative provincial government.

While the poor turnout is undeniably a travesty of democracy, apathetic citizens not choosing to vote is a far cry from extending that right to prisoners who have, through their actions, forfeited the opportunity to participate in choosing who represents them in government.

In a civilized society, rights come with responsibilities. One of a person's most fundamental obligations is to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. Those who fail to do so are punished, and part of that punishment is that they must – for the safety and good of the public – forfeit many of their rights, including the vote.

"I can't see having someone that may be convicted of beating somebody up or raping a woman and then giving them the right to vote," Stelmach said in response to Taft's suggestion. "That's not the Alberta way."

I agree with the premier, to a point. Although the premier is correct in saying that prisoners should be prohibited from voting, his statement also seems to imply that anyone who has committed a crime at any point in his or her life must never be allowed to take part in another election. Ever.

This goes too far.

Once convicted individuals are released and deemed to have repaid their debt to society, they must also regain the right cast a ballot.

Ultimately, isn't that what justice and democracy are all about?

That's the real Alberta way.

Letters to the editor Magical response to Merlin's plight

In a time when many have become consumed with their own lives, be it family obligations, work or social activities, I am very happy to hear how many have come together to help one local individual after a senseless tragedy that occurred on Monday, September 15.

On Monday, September 15, my girlfriend arrived home after work to her excited three-year-old Black Lab/Border Collie, Merlin. He was let outside, as he is everyday when she arrives home, but that day was not the same. Unfortunately, Merlin ventured out on the street and was struck by a vehicle. The driver of the vehicle did not stop or return once realizing that they had struck Merlin. The police were notified, but unfortunately, not for lack of caring or trying, they could not do anything.

Merlin was taken to a veterinarian in Olds, where he remains today. After X-rays the following day, the vet delivered the news that Merlin had a broken pelvis in two places.

A few different scenarios were given to my girlfriend and she left very upset and wondering what the future held for her best friend.

Merlin, like any other family dog is an important part of the family and the decision to operate or to stop the suffering was a tough one. The cost of surgery would be $2,500 - $3,600. Then, it was learned that Merlin did not have sensation in his legs and amputation would be a possibility if it was not repaired.

After a few days of rest and many doses of pain medication, Merlin regained sensation, making the decision to follow through with the surgery a relief as having him put to sleep was a last resort.

Many members of the public came together to raise funds for the surgery and help Merlin with his recovery.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone in the Didsbury, Olds and Airdrie areas, who have taken time out of their busy lives to come to Merlin's aid and have given him a second chance.

In a time when it is "every man for himself," it is nice to know that everyone can come together for a great cause and that many do still care. A special thank you to Tamara who spent time with Merlin and organized the fund raiser to support him.

Thank you to all those who have helped Merlin. He was scheduled to go into surgery on Monday, September 22 and he will have many weeks of rest, leading to hopefully a speedy recovery.

To the person who struck Merlin and failed to stop, shame on you!

Think about election when gassing up next time

It took more than a year after hurricane Katrina devastated New Orleans before the Energy Information Agency (EIA) finally concluded the affects the hurricane had on oil production and refining were negligible at best. This conclusion wasn't much of a surprise given that traditionally, hurricanes have a consistent history of reducing demand more than they affect the supply of oil. In the aftermath of most hurricanes that come ashore from the Gulf of Mexico, gas stations can't pump gas because they have no electricity and commuters can't return to work until the roads are passable, and electricity has been restored.

Fast-forward to hurricane Ike hitting the Gulf Coast and once again Albertans are expected to believe it is reasonable to immediately hike gasoline prices by an average price of 12 cents on the speculative premise of a possible gasoline shortage. However, when oil drops from a record $150 a barrel to just over $100 a barrel, we are expected to believe it takes time for gasoline prices to trickle back down, to reflect the lower price for oil.

How gullible are we as a public? In the aftermath of hurricane Katrina, Exxon Mobil's fourth-quarter profit rose 27% to more than $10 billion, a record for the company and one of the highest quarterly totals ever posted. Ironically after investigating consumer complaints, politicians in both Canada and the United States couldn't find any evidence of price gouging.

Oil and gas development has been very good to Albertans but that is no excuse to allow the very few who control the price of oil, to gouge the many. It is time we held big oil accountable for price collusion and price gouging. Price gouging is not just anti-competitive; it is illegal, and it is a cancer on our economy.

If only our currently elected officials had the courage to look into their campaign coffers, they just might find some of that elusive evidence of price collusion and gouging that eludes their official investigations. Then again, you the public now have a perfect opportunity to make a change. If our current elected officials can't find any evidence of price gouging, elect someone new. It's time we held our elected officials accountable. It is a simple process: vote for someone else! Look beyond party labels and affiliations, and vote for an individual that has the integrity and courage to represent your interests in Ottawa. Think about this the next time you are filling up at the pump!

ZOOM, ZOOM - Don Renner takes his pride and joy, a 1998 Indy Corvette Pace Car, for a spin around the Carstairs countryside.

MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

With the top down, stereo cranked up and slick sunglasses in place, it's time to head down to the post office. For one Carstairs man, there is no such thing as an ordinary drive downtown.

A few residents have surely noticed this Corvette humming down the streets of Carstairs. Its polished "radar blue" paint and stylish yellow decals and hubcaps make it irresistible eye candy to even the most discriminating of tastes.

And while it's a safe bet most would consider it a dream car, for 52-year-old Don Renner, it is just, well, a car—with a little extra juice under the hood.

Don owns one of only 15, 1998 Corvette Indy Pace Cars made in Canada. Only 1,163 were made in total, with five of them actually being used as an official pilot car.

However, despite the obvious significance of the car, Don admits it wasn't necessarily a purchase of passion as much as it was impulse.

"I didn't even know anything about this car when I bought it," says the Vette enthusiast, "I went down and bought an AutoTrader and I just opened up to it."

Shortly thereafter he took a trip down to the Calgary dealership and found two available; one was an American made six-speed, and the other was the last to come off the production line in Canada.

Of course, the 20,000 km on the latter was also of great appeal.

"The guy who had this before, he bought it new and he had 20,000 km (on it) in seven years," said Don as he swiftly peered at the gravel driveway and kicked some dirt in a nervous gesture. "I've put 50,000 km on in three summers."

However, the additional kilometres aren't a problem for Don, who says the fun in owning such a car comes from the thrill of driving it, rather than just taking it out of the garage for the occasional show and shine.

"Those guys, they're not drivers most of them, (they're) trailer queens," he says with a laugh.

The car boasts an all-aluminum 5.7-litre LS1 small block, which produces 345 horsepower and 350 lb.-ft of torque. The speedometer will climb all the way to 300 km/h if given the chance.

While he admits it's tempting to let a lead foot drop on the pedal, he says the dangers of hitting the gas on highways and side roads greatly outweigh the thrill of the ride.

With that in mind though, he's not afraid to see how fast it takes to go from 0 to 80 km/h. And as this reporter can attest, it was over before I had time to dart my eyes from the road to the speedometer.

"It's so fun to drive, I don't really expect anyone to make comments on the car, but it just has so much power and the handling is unbelievable..." says Don.

He adds the car serves as an extension of a love affair with not only Chevy vehicles, but of Corvettes.

"I've always been a Vette fan since day one, but there's just something about them, they've been around for so long and (well), I'm a Chevy fan," he says while pointing to one of his family's Chevy trucks, which has racked up over 700,000 km and is still trucking ahead.

Although he doesn't expect anyone to make comments, he says it's hard to avoid the stares and excitement of both youngsters and older folks.

Oh, and the police, they find interest in it as well.

Don reminisced of a time when the RCMP had pulled him over while traveling through a school zone.

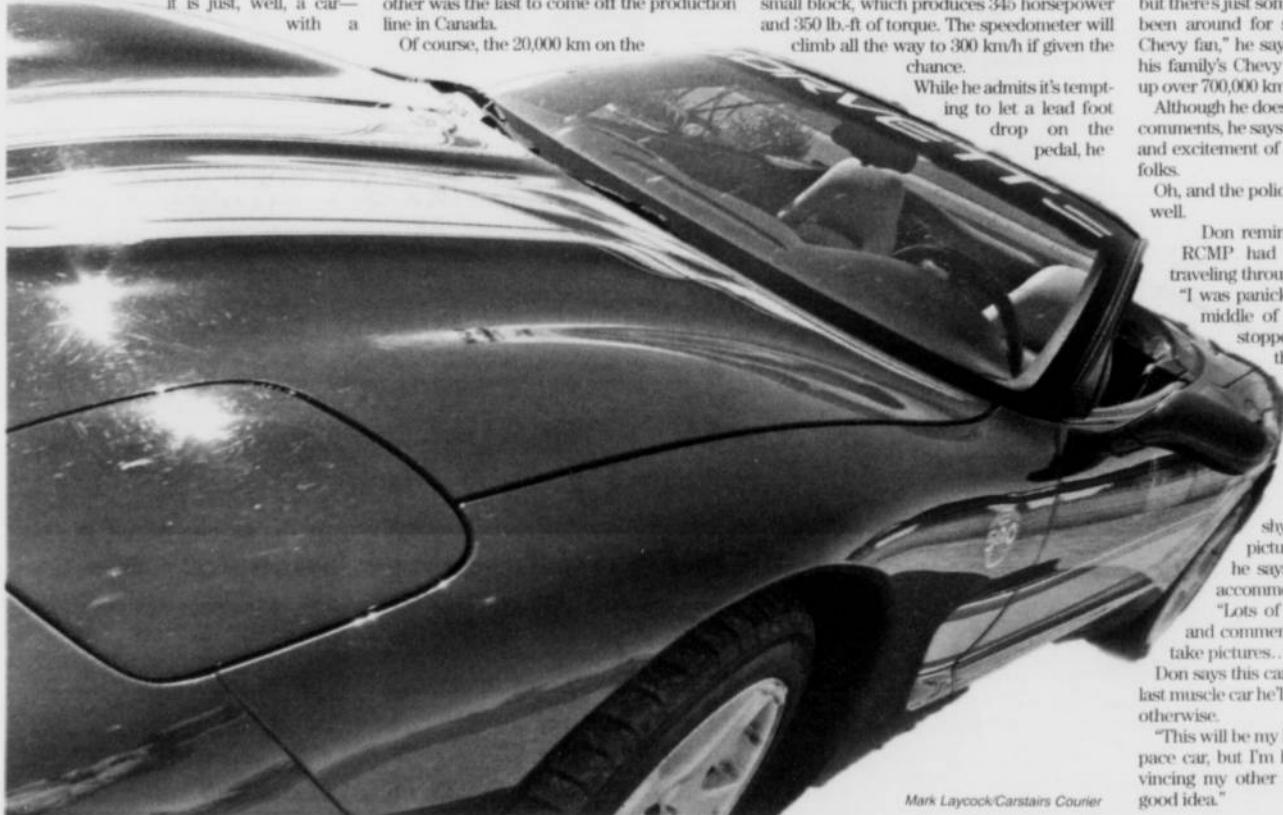

"I was panicked, it was the school and middle of the day... sure enough I stopped and I wasn't speeding in the school zone, so I pulled out my registration and insurance and the (officer) says, 'Oh no, no, no. We just stopped you to look at the car,'" he recalls with a laugh.

While Don admits he's a bit shy when people want to take pictures or ask him about the car, he says he's more than happy to accommodate their curiosity.

"Lots of times people will stop by and comment on it or will stop by and take pictures... it's pretty eye-catching."

Don says this car will probably serve as the last muscle car he'll invest in—unless he hears otherwise.

"This will be my last one unless I find a 2007 pace car, but I'm having a little trouble convincing my other half that that would be a good idea."

Anglican community celebrates 100 years of religion in Didsbury

BY SABEEN AHMAD
Review Staff

St. Cyprian's Anglican Church was packed with more than the usual 30 to 40 worshippers on Sunday, not just for Sunday service but also to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the church in Didsbury.

Bishop Hoskins of the Diocese of Calgary was in attendance and delivered the sermon for the special occasion and many past and present clergy were present as well. Rev. Bob Bettson, who served at the church for a couple of years until 2003 and now serves at St. Mark's Anglican Church in Calgary, felt like he was coming home to family.

The family theme was quite evident throughout the celebration.

Myrna Watts, a member of the church helped arrange the lunch for the anniversary. Watts said that a committee was put together and began planning for the anniversary just in May. With such a close-knit church community the planning was not hard as everyone was willing to help volunteer their time and homes to accommodate the out-of-town guests.

"This celebration cost us nothing."

Watts said that this occasion was very important to the Anglican community and something to be proud of.

"Our church is the only one, in Didsbury, to celebrate its one-hundredth anniversary."

Newly ordained, Rev. Bonnie Luft, Priest-in-charge, echoed Watts' thoughts on the unity of the church community and the feeling of family. "From the first Sunday...it just felt like family."

"The support for one another and that sense of family is very strong here."

Following mass, church members and guests were treated to a reception lunch and a birthday cake for the church in the Parish Hall. The hall also had on display various pictures of the past priests who have served at the church.

Bishop Cyprian Pinkham consecrated the church in 1908. Originally the church had no running water or electricity and was heated by coal, with an individual appointed to continue to bank the coal oven. In 1996 the church was rebuilt to what it is today. Stained glass windows were donated by various artists with some of the original furnishings still in place such as the prayer desk. Larger than the original church, Watts said that the church was built for the community to grow. One main difference between the new church and the old was that the altar was built on the north wall as opposed to the usual east wall so the church could be wider and more people could be closer to the alter.

Didsbury Search and rescue centralize in Water Valley

BY MARK LAYCOCK

For the Review

Members of the Didsbury Search and Rescue organization are excited about a new storage centre being erected near Water Valley.

The building will act as a storage facility for equipment and supplies used during rescue operations.

Peggy Wigton, secretary for the organization, said the building has been in the works for three years as a way to consolidate all equipment used by volunteer members, rather than storing different pieces at various residences.

"The majority of our searches are (around Water Valley), so if a quad is over in Didsbury, that's an hour away. If it's in Water Valley we're 15 miles from Burnt Timber," said Wigton.

The storage centre will be built next to the existing Cremona Fire Hall on land being leased by Mountain View County at a reduced rate.

The $58,000 facility was paid for entirely through donations and fundraisers and should be built by the end of October.

Didsbury Search and Rescue is a local branch of a provincewide non-profit organization that gathers volunteers from across Alberta to assist the RCMP in searching for missing and lost persons.

The local chapter has 23 members from across the county who meet once a month.

Wigton said members were thrilled when the project got final approval and are looking forward to centralizing tools and equipment that have previously been stored at members' houses.

"This is awesome," said Wigton enthusiastically. "We can get all our equipment together because we have a home (for) it now."

She added that the organization is always looking for additional members and anyone looking to volunteer their time is asked to contact Peggy at: 403-335-2688.

How a Personal Directive can give you peace-of-mind

Imagine not being able to make decisions for yourself because of injury or illness. Your relatives and friends do not automatically have the legal right to make decisions for you such as medical treatments and accommodations.

For this reason, adult Albertans are encouraged to create a Personal Directive, a legal document that provides written instructions and/or names someone to speak on your behalf in the event you are unable to make personal choices.

The Alberta government has made it easier than ever before to create a personal directive with a new form and online registry. The registry allows healthcare professionals to know who to contact in the event of an emergency.

Fire dept. fundraiser

The Didsbury Volunteer Fire Department appears in the 2009 The Fire Within calendar, which features photography of volunteer firefighters and the work they do across Alberta.

Local volunteer firefighters will be selling the calendars door to door throughout the coming months and will also make it available at select local businesses and community events.

"The calendar initiative is truly community-based and every dollar raised by Didsbury through selling the calendar will stay in Didsbury. The goal of this initiative is to recognize the immense contribution of all firefighters everywhere who day and night risk their lives, yet largely go unnoticed," said Chad Sartison, chair of The Fire Within.

The Fire Within calendar project is designed to bridge the gap between what municipalities can afford and the growing needs of fire departments. Funds raised through calendar sales make it possible for firefighters to access training and equipment that they otherwise wouldn't have. They are available from fire department members.

Vehicle thefts prompt police investigation

BY MARK LAYCOCK

For the Review

Carstairs residents are being asked to keep their vehicles locked and items secured following a rash of vehicle thefts.

Didsbury RCMP Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer said the department is investigating the matter after receiving complaints of numerous vehicles being stolen and abandoned either in town or in Calgary.

"We're trying to do research of all our previous files to see if there is a correlation or link between any of them to see if anything is going on," said O'Dwyer.

Police believe that thieves are stealing the vehicles, using them to commit other crimes, and then abandoning them when finished.

"A lot of times we find that the people that are committing the crimes are from the city and what they're doing is coming from Calgary to small towns and going back to Calgary where they will abandon (the vehicle)."

He added that most vehicles have been recovered within two days of being reported, but quite commonly are found damaged.

In a recent incident, a Carstairs resident came home from a three-week vacation only to find a stolen vehicle parked in their driveway.

As a result, the Didsbury detachment is working with Calgary City Police to investigate the matter.

O'Dwyer said the jump in thefts appears to be localized to Carstairs, with no particular type of vehicle being targeted.

The vehicle thefts follow several complaints of home break-and-entries in town in the last few months. Homeowners have reported missing jewelry, money, passports and in one instance a safe, which was later recovered in Calgary.

Disconcerting to one victim was that the home was entered and robbed during the early hours of the afternoon.

O'Dwyer said the department is aware of the break-ins but emphasized no link has been made between the home break-ins and stolen vehicles, but added there is always the possibility.

Furthermore, he commented that a lot of stolen vehicles and break-ins are the result of owners either not locking their vehicles, leaving spare keys in or around the exterior of the vehicle, and more commonly, leaving objects in plain sight.

In the last few weeks, items ranging from GPS devices to iPods have been stolen.

In one instance, a vehicle was stolen after the thief broke into an adjacent truck and found keys to the other vehicle inside.

"If you give someone the opportunity to commit a crime, to those inclined to do it, they will," said O'Dwyer.

He added that even protective devices such as steering wheel clubs might not be enough if owners neglect to lock doors and remove keys.

"If they really want your car bad enough, it doesn't matter what you do, they will steal it."

Residents are asked to stay vigilant and are urged to immediately report any suspicious activity to RCMP.

CESD stresses importance of internet safety

BY DAN SINGLETON
For the Review

With the 2008-2009 school year now underway, Didsbury parents and other caregivers are reminded of the importance of keeping students of all ages safe from internet crime.

With computer use now widespread in all schools, and the internet an increasingly large part of the learning process in those schools, the need to be vigilant when it comes to such things as cyberbullying, child pornography and staking has never been greater.

Chinook's Edge superintendent Jim Gibbons, a former school principal, says while the internet is a useful tool, it can also lead to trouble.

"Along with the benefits of this technology come some drawbacks that can threaten the safety of our children, including the existence of sexual predators on-line, cyberbullying and invasion of privacy," said Gibbons.

"There are other on-line pitfalls to be aware of as well, including inaccurate information, viruses, fraud and scams."

The Chinook's Edge School Division has put out a number of helpful tips for parents and caregivers regarding internet safety, including the following:

- * Put your computer in a high traffic areas where you can monitor what your child is doing.

- * Teach your child how to get out of inappropriate websites.

- * Don't overreact when your child encounters an inappropriate site. Praise them for telling you, and assist them in known how to exit from the site quickly.

- * Help your child understand what he or she sends on email should not be considered private, and that he or she needs to make sure the comments are appropriate.

- * Establish home computer safety rules including never giving out personal information or personal photos online.

While some crimes are thankfully rarely seen in rural communities – crimes such as the gang violence that has emerged in the larger cities - internet crime can and does occur in all communities, including in small towns like Carstairs.

As such, knowing how to identify and counter internet crime is now a must for all parents and caregivers.

"Good decision making holds the most promise for safety on the internet," said Gibbons.

Obviously educators and school administrators in central Alberta take internet safety seriously and are working hard to keep students safe at school.

As far as computer use outside the school environment, it's up to caregivers to do what it takes to protect young people from what can be a dangerous part of the modern world.

So with the school year just underway there's no better time than the present for parents to take a few minutes to make sure Didsbury's young people know about the dangers of internet crime. It will be time well spent.
